Ethics Statement

We are committed to upholding the highest standards of ethics in data analysis. This commitment involves strict adherence to principles of integrity, transparency, and respect for data privacy and confidentiality. We ensure that all data collected and analyzed in this project are handled with the utmost confidentiality. Sittercity does not collect data on religion, sexual orientation, or other sensitive demographics that could potentially endanger the safety of any subscriber. We are dedicated to transparency in our methodologies, analyses, and findings. All assumptions, methods, and limitations of the data analysis are openly disclosed to provide clear insight into our research process and to allow for independent verification.

We acknowledge the potential for bias in data collection, given that we are all current college students with no prior experience in the obligations surrounding parenting. Our analysis was conducted with proactive measures to identify and mitigate any such biases. This includes diverse sampling, rigorous data validation, and the use of statistical techniques to ensure unbiased and fair analysis. Our approach does not intend to inflict harm or bias based on age, nor do we seek to undermine an individual's worth or capabilities based on their educational attainment. Instead, we aim to utilize educational level as a key factor in supporting our pilot program, which primarily focuses on college students as the target audience.
